FUTURE NCAA TOURNAMENT SITES CHOSEN

Thirty-six cities were selected to host first round and regional sites for the 2011, 2012 and 2013 NCAA basketball tournament.

The 2011 championship includes a vast majority of cities that have served as hosts during this decade. Charlotte ranks third among cities with the most tournament games in history, having served as host 20 times since 1958. Remaining 2011 first- and second-round host cities, each multiple-time hosts, include Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Tampa, Tucson and Washington, D.C. Regional sites for 2011 are Anaheim, which will host for the fifth time since 1998; San Antonio, which has hosted seven times in the past 13 years; Newark, which will host for the first time in the city's history; and New Orleans, which has hosted 10 times previously. The 2011 Final Four will be played in Reliant Stadium in Houston, Texas.

First- and second-round sites in 2012 include Albuquerque, Columbus, Greensboro, Louisville, Nashville, Omaha, Pittsburgh and Portland. Louisville, which will host for the 13th time, has not hosted the championship since 1991. Atlanta will prepare for the 2013 Final Four by hosting the South Regional in 2012, marking the 20th time the city has hosted the men's basketball championship. Phoenix will host its fourth regional in 2012. The other two regional hosts are Boston, which has hosted the tournament three times previously, and St. Louis, which has hosted three Final Fours and seven regional rounds. The 2012 Final Four will be played in the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans.

Recognizing that 2013 is the 75th anniversary of the championship, many cities which have served as the backdrop to great tournament moments were chosen. Auburn Hills, Austin, Dayton, Kansas City, Lexington, Philadelphia, Salt Lake City, and San Jose were selected to host first-and-second-rounds. Indianapolis, Los Angeles and North Texas, which will prepare for the 2014 Final Four with a regional at Cowboys Stadium, were chosen for the regional rounds. The 2013 Final Four will be played in the Georgia Dome in Atlanta.

In addition, Dayton will host the Opening Round game, between the 64th and 65th seeded teams, as they have every year since the tournament expanded in 2001.
